

Girolamo Mercuriale
De excrementis (On Excretions)

Translation of contents by Kathleen Walker-Meikle (2018)

BOOK I

- Ch. 1 On the usefulness and worth of understanding urine
- Ch. 2 On the names for urine and what it is
- Ch. 3 The nature of urine which the author demonstrates with arguments, and shows that it is not new, but the same as Hippocrates, Plato, Aristotle and Galen
- Ch. 4 On the different types of urine
- Ch. 5 On the circumstances of the best kind of urine
- Ch. 6 On the natural causes of the different types of urines
- Ch. 7 On the non-natural causes of (different) urines
- Ch. 8 On judgements, which are made from urine
- Ch. 9 On the use of urine, and of those (things), which are observed in the inspection (of urine)

BOOK II: On the deposits/dregs of the bowels

- Ch. 1 On the usefulness of having knowledge of the deposits
- Ch. 2 On the names of the deposits of the bowels and what they are
- Ch. 3 On the generation of faeces
- Ch. 4 On the different kinds of faeces
- Ch. 5 On the natural causes of the differences in faeces
- Ch. 6 On the non-natural causes of the differences in faeces

RENAISSANCE SKIN

Ch. 7 On the signs by which good faeces can be distinguished

Ch. 8 On judgements, which are made from the deposits of the bowels

Ch. 9 On the use of faeces, and of those (things) which are observed in the inspection of faeces

BOOK III: On sweat

Ch. 1 On sweat

Ch. 2 On tears

Ch. 3 On spit

Ch. 4 On mucus

Ch. 5 On the filth in the ears